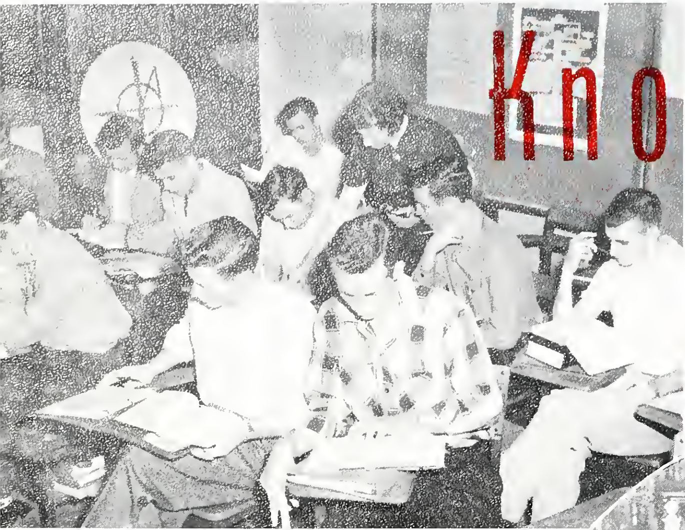
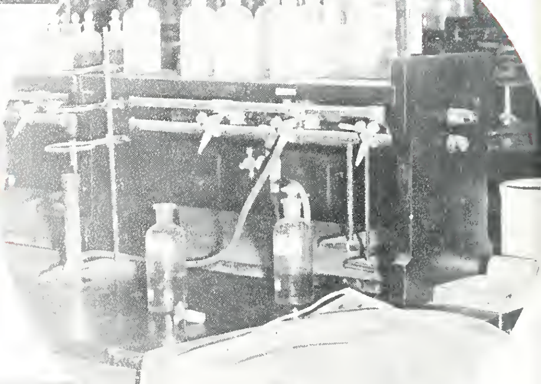
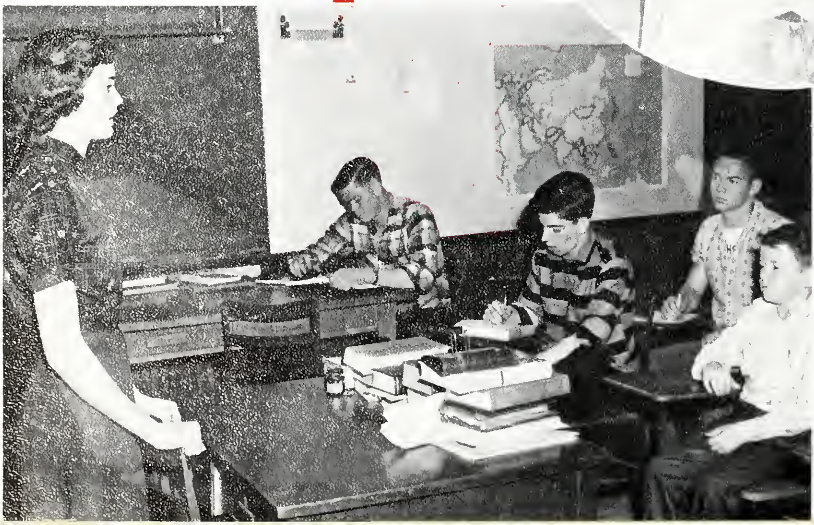
Progress

Knowledg

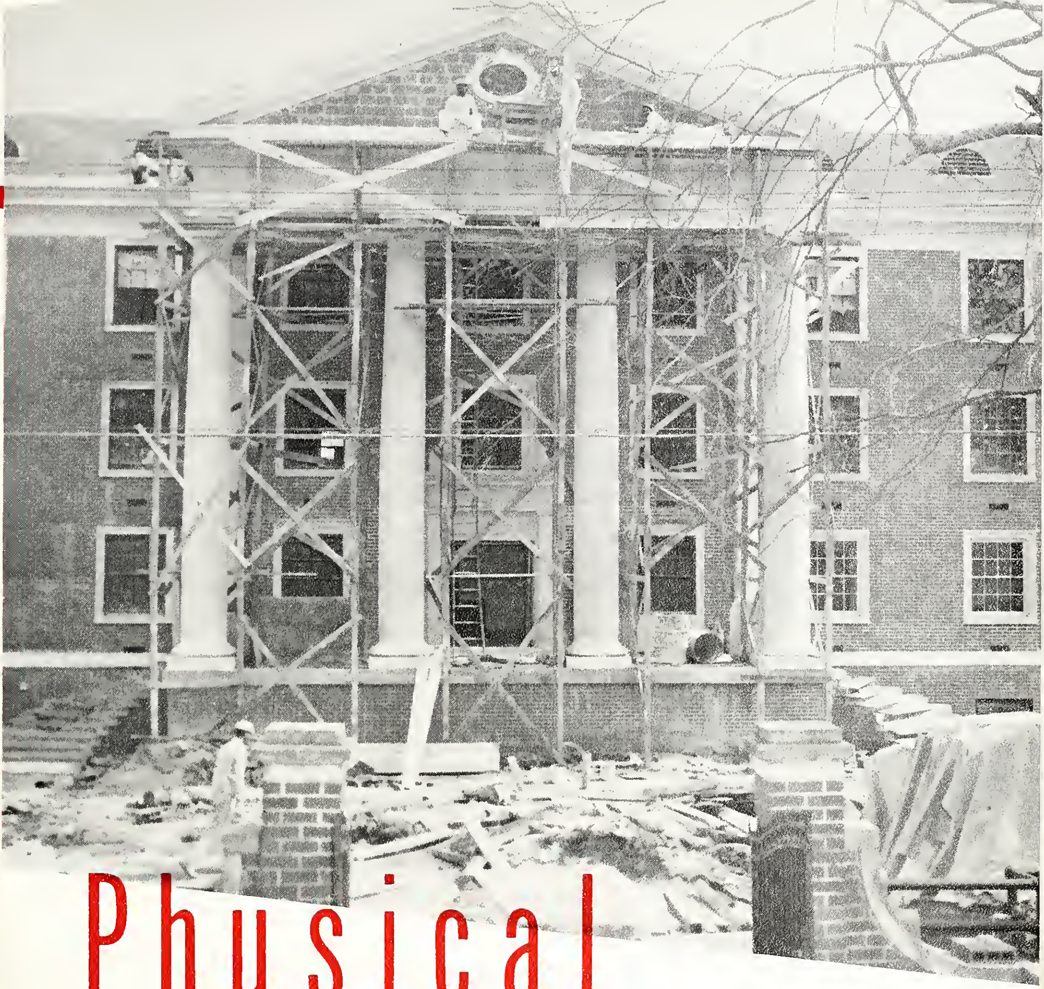






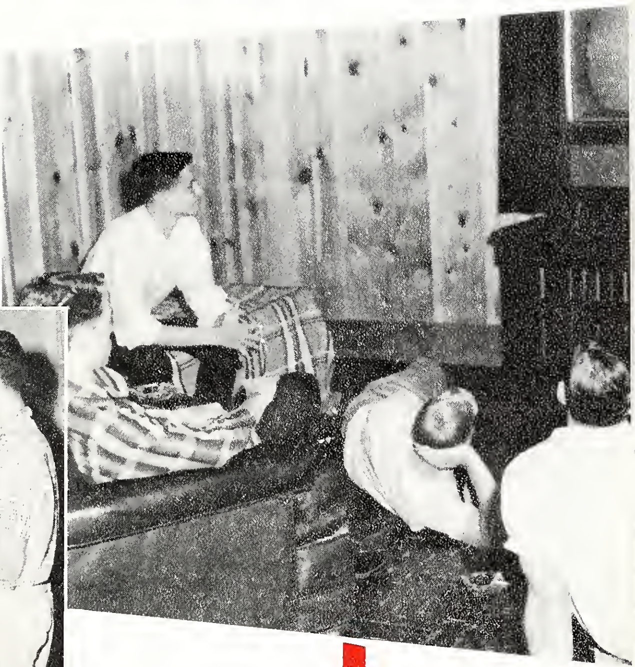
Alabama College is proud to offer graduate work in the fields of elementary education, and secondary education in the following subjects: art, biology, psychology, speech, health, physical education, and home economics. Many new courses have been added to our curriculum. Now we have students majoring in pre-dentistry, pre-law, pre-medicine, pre-engineering, business administration, and commerce. As a result of the increase in the number of courses available, there has also been an increase in our faculty staff.

Numerous recent building projects can be noted on our campus. The laughter and chatter of small children that we often hear as we walk toward the swimming pool is usually coming from our new nursery school. Here the girls studying child development learn how to cope with children in different situations, and the parents of the children are assured of reliable baby sitters. The growing popularity of having a car on campus has necessitated the building of more parking areas; so the grass is being shoveled away and bricks are laid down in its place. Alabama College really enlarged this fall when the barriers of our sacred gates were broken by building a new dormitory outside the gates.



Physical Expansion. . .

Social Life...



In an attempt to destroy our reputation of being a "suitcase college", various clubs have been responsible for planning campus-wide activities for the week-ends, these diversions ranging from vigorous skating parties to such inactive play as watching television. The Tea House is becoming more popular with many of the students too. Improvements have been made—new paint jobs, new lights, a sign for the outside, and a knocker for the door—to induce the students to socialize more in the "tea hole". Usually, we find it crowded with students who are enjoying eating, smoking, talking, and dancing.

The gates really widened this fall when men were admitted to Alabama College. Yes, co-education became a reality on our campus this year resulting in not only a larger student body but also a more nearly balanced one. The boys arrived in September bringing with them a renewed vigorous spirit at Alabama College. The removal of this sex restriction on admittance is an important factor in initiating Alabama College's climb toward greater heights in the future.

Enrollment . . .

As in most yearbooks one of the outstanding features of it is the dedication. This year the Montage staff has selected a person in the administration who we feel has made an outstanding contribution to the Montage as its advisor as well as the other publications. His job is both an important and busy one. He is constantly on the go trying to meet a newspaper deadline or planning and promoting some big event on campus. To quote the 1956 Montage, "His co-operative spirit in working with students is the only A. C. phenomenon he neglects to publicize." His name cannot be mentioned without some student saying, "Ohhhhh-that voice!" Elite Night would not be the same if you did not hear his voice booming over the microphone announcing each person's entrance on the stage. And so we would like to show our appreciation by dedicating the 1957 Montage to you, Mr. Ralph Sears.

Dr. Lund, in his fourth year as President of Alabama College, found himself in a strategic position —that of being the leader when the college was undergoing major changes. The paramount revision in policy was in the realm of enrollment. Alabama College was to become co-educational. This year has been a transitional period, and on the basis of the ease with which boys have entered into school life and the spirit with which the girl students have accepted them, we predict that co-education will be a big success.

To you, Dr. Lund, our able President, we express our gratitude for guiding us in this change. You have not foresaken "your girls," but never have you been impartial. Because of your love for all the students and your sincere desire to make Alabama College one of the best small colleges in the nation, we say, "Thank you."

DEAN OF THE COLLEGE

DR. RICHARD POWERS

Dean Powers maintains that he has two major duties to perform at Alabama College. One is to protect the faculty members from each other, and his second job is to protect the students from the faculty. We students do not know with what degree of efficiency he has fulfilled his first responsibility, but we do know that whenever we have any problems regardless of whether they are in the realm of student-faculty relationships, Dean Powers is always willing to help; and he usually has a solution to suggest. Your resignation means a deep loss for A. C., but we give you our sincere best wishes for happiness and success.

BUSINESS MANAGER

MR. LEE A. BARCLAY

To prove Mr. Barclay's interest in improving Alabama College we can view the two new parking lots, the new nursery school, and the ultra-modern men's dormitory that is now being built. We older students may be more appreciative of some of the minor improvements, though, such as remodeling the home management house, installing water fountains on third floor Comer, and redecorating the immortal Tea House. We appreciate your generosity, Mr. Barclay, and your attempts to keep the campus in good condition without exceeding your allotted budget.

DEAN EMERITUS

DR. T. H. NAPIER

Dean Napier is a man that is familiar to every A. C. student. Since his retirement in 1952, the college girls have still visited him and his wife in their comfortable, yellow stucco house just off the campus, and he still receives a standing ovation at Alumnae dinners. His devotion to this college and his love for the stduents have qualified him as a permanent fixture of A. C.

DEAN OF STUDENTS

DEAN IVA GIBSON

Dignified, sophisticated, charming, and friendly—these are adjectives that describe our Dean of Students. Dean Gibson performs many versatile duties at A. C. She chaperones our dances for us, is chairman of the advisory committee to the Student Court, helps worthy students obtain financial aid, and is a counselor to all students. We feel that you are a valuable asset to A. C., and we want you to know that you are one of our favorite persons.

The Student Government Association is an integral part of Alabama College. The students, by governing themselves, learn the art of self-discipline and develop into mature, worthwhile, responsible persons. One of the most exciting times of the year is March—when S.G.A. elections are held. Of course, the Seniors hate to give up their sacred positions; but then, because we have such a bounty of qualified people, we always feel that we are leaving our Student Government offices in capable hands. We are proud of our Student Government, especially the Honor System, claimed as an unattainable ideal by some schools but proved to be a definite reality on our campus.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL: Ann Rankin, Sammye Norton, Lois Swindal, Sarah Wilbanks, Carol Bailey, Barbara Baker, Ann Kimbrough

executive council

This has been an important year for the Executive Council because it has been the task of those students to adjust our government so that boys, a newly added attraction at A.C., can be included in Student Government affairs. These girls have spent many wrangling hours in the S.G.A. office in Reynolds, attempting to decide what offices men students could hold, regulations to be placed on them, and the best possible means of giving the male students a fair chance to participate in Student Government without inviting them to predominate. The members of the "Exec" Council have proven their abilities as leaders this year by maintaining our high standards of Student Government in this transitional period of going co-educational and in laying the groundwork for good Student Government in the future.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL: Monette Strickland, Terree Cox, Sadie DeWeese Haines, Dot Smith, Yvonne Worrell, Pat Ackerman

ANN KIMBROUGH, Chief Justice

Justices on the Student Court have to be willing to neglect studies, parties, and sleep to solve cases in which students have violated the Honor Code. It is the duty of the justices to try to understand and help the students who have broken some regulation: but at all times, the Court must be concerned with promoting high standards of conduct at Alabama College. The willingness of the faculty and administration to allow us students to discipline ourselves and the respect and prestige which the Student Court has among the faculty and student body prove that we indeed have good government by the students.

Everytime we see "old Glory" flying in the breeze in front of Main Dormitory or see the Purple and Gold convocation flags scattered over the campus, we know that our Senators have been at work. It is in the Senate that the rules, which we and future students at A. C. will obey, are formed. Our Senators are continually striving to keep our rules up-to-date; this involves minor revisions in the handbook and new amendments to the Constitution each year. The members of the Senate perform versatile duties—they are always vulnerable to pleas for conducting tours on campus, registering Honor Scholarship contestants, and helping with Freshman orientation.

The Alabama College Art Department has a high aim—one of providing the student with a liberal arts background, a background which includes an awareness and an understanding of art and its place in the society of man.

The Art Department offers its majors the opportunity of concentrating in one of the following phases of art: painting, art history, commercial art and design, ceramics, or art education.

The relation of the Art Department to the college community is of a cultural nature, offering exhibitions of work of art, films and lectures on art, and art education workshops.

Mr. David Huntley, Head of the Art Department, comes to us from North Carolina. Although this is his first year at A. C., the students know that he can always be counted on for advice and help. He actively participates in the College Theatre, is a College Night critic, and a member of the Publications Board.

A research program, sponsored by the National Cancer Institute, is now in progress in this department, under the direction of Dr. Bailey.

Head of the Biology Depatment, Mr. C. G. Sharp, is affectionately known by his students as "Papa Sharp." Much to his students delight, Mr. Sharp was married last year. He and his wife entertain the majors frequently with parties in their home.

The Business Administration Department, formerly the Secretarial Science Department, is in the process of undergoing drastic changes because of A. C.'s going co-ed. It is to become a four year division of Business Administration, with the former courses continued and new courses added.

It will continue to be one of A. C.'s most outstanding departments, with its graduates well qualified for careers in their chosen fields.

Head of the B. A. Department, Miss Lelah Brownfield, is known for the interest she has in her students, both as undergraduates and graduates. She is interested in student activities, and is active in many.

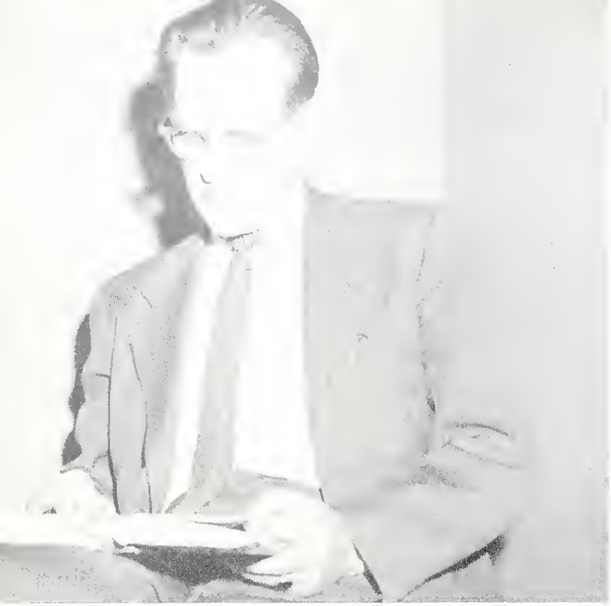
As have the other departments of the college, the Education Department has made plans for men student teachers. The department offers the student teacher practical experience in the laboratory school. Education courses provide a background in the philosophies and theories of education.

This is Dr. M. L. Orr's last year as Head of the Education Department. Next year he will be the Dean. The understanding and sympathy which have characterized him as Head of the Education Department will, no doubt, be his outstanding characteristics in his new position with the college. His pipe is Dr. Orr's trademark. He is never seen without it.



DR. LAWRENCE EDWARDS

Besides numerous sections of Freshman English and Sophomore Literature courses taken by almost every student of Alabama College, advanced classes are offered in English and American literature, the drama, creative writing, journalism, grammar, and the history of the English language. The members of the English staff are concerned with guiding students in the appreciation and understanding of literature, encouraging would-be writers to develop their imagination and inventiveness, and teaching students to manipulate, correctly and effectively, that tool known as the English language.

Dr. Eva Golson, one of the most dedicated teachers at Alabama College, can be found in her office on second floor Camer until late in the night grading papers or making plans for teaching one of her classes in Freshman English, Sophomore Literature, Chaucer, or the English foreign language

No matter how difficult courses in French, German, or Spanish are, no Alabama College student will ever complain that one of these subjects is boring. In Spanish classes, interest is added, beyond that of the fascination of the language itself, by having the Latin American students act as teachers on some days. Those students learning French listen to records of famous French songs or read spicy French novels in the original. Dr. Eber's first semester German students were so enthusiastic they had a special table in the college dining hall where only German was spoken (supposedly); and as special treat, Dr. Eber, himself, ate with them once a week. These are rather good ways of learning to speak another language, aren't they?

Dr. Pierson, as Head of the Foreign Language Department, is also faculty advisor to the foreign students on campus. At the beginning of each semester, she can be seen in Comer running from one classroom to another, helping the new foreign students to locate their classes. When these students have schedule difficulties, are homesick, or discouraged because of their inability to speak and understand English, Dr. Pierson always has time to have a friendly talk with them, and they come away encouraged and stimulated.

Miss Abi Russell, Head Librarian, received her Bachelor's degree from the University of Georgia, her Master's from Columbia University, and a diploma from the Emory University Library School. DR. LESTER HARTSELL

The courses taught in the Mathematics Department range from Math-A, for the benefit of those unskilled in this field, to Differential Equation, for those mathematical-minded students. This department is receiving more emphasis and is being enlarged as a result of co-educational at Alabama College.

It is also undergoing changes in another aspect—we have a new professor who is Head of the department. In his students' minds, Dr. Hartsell has already proved his ability to fill this position because he is devoted to his field, has a profound knowledge of Mathematics, and is concerned with the welfare of the students. Dr. Hartsell realizes that without a knowledge and the application of mathematics, it would be impossible for us to be enjoying the luxuries of the "machine age" because mathematical formulars were used in drawing up the plans for all our intricate machines. Besides instructing his students in the fundamentals of mathematics, he also tries to instill in them the importance of this subject and to show them some of the ways in which math has been and can be used for the benefit of society.

The music majors are one of the most dedicated groups on campus; they spend hours almost every night practicing in Calkins; they attend all the concerts and musical recitals on campus; and many of them give recitals, themselves, their senior year. Their devotion to music and their concentrated efforts to be creative in this field are well rewarded—we have a Charale that sounds like a professional group and this year the Alabama College Music Department produced an opera which was hailed by all who saw it as a grand success.

Dr. Fraser has motivated the members of this group to develop their talents to the highest potentials by arranging ample opportunities for them to perform. They sang for convocation during Religious Emphasis Week; they gave a concert in Palmer auditorium; they have visited various schools in Birmingham; and during Spring Holidays the Alabama College Chorale toured South Alabama, visiting such towns as Selma and Mobile. A familiar sight in many of the dormitories this year has been a locked door with a prominent sign on the outside warning would-be visitors "Testing. Do not Disturb!" We previously unenlightened students soon learned not to become perturbed because it was only someone in Dr. Eber's testing class giving an I. Q. test. In fact, many of us unsuspecting students were persuaded to take these rather popular intelligence tests which proved to be futile in our estimation because no one would tell us our score. Almost all students on campus became well acquainted with King House, Dr. Eber's famous test and grading system, and Dr. Vickery's companion in and outside the classroom—Charcoal.

Dr. Vickery, the Head of the Psychology Department, is undoubtedly one of the busiest persons on campus. It seems that almost every week she is flying to Chicago, Atlanta, Washington, or New York for some important meeting. Her students never tire of listening to her relate amusing anecdotes she experienced or observed on one of her trips; and, of course, she can still fascinate us with details of her trip to Europe this summer. Her classes are not only fun, though, but are intellectual and thought provoking as well. Dr. Vickery, as one of the South's most prominent educators, is very concerned with maintaining a high quality of learning in the secondary schools and colleges in the U. S. and is fearful lest a degree from college becomes so easily obtained that it is relatively valueless.

Almost everyone becomes familiar with the Speech Department his freshman year because an introductory course in public speaking is required of practically every student at Alabama College. However, Speech is a much larger field than public address; actually the classes offered under the caption "Speech" include four major areas of this field—Speech Correction, the Theater, Interpretation, and Rhetoric and Public Address. Of course, those students majoring in speech specialize in one of these areas but are required to take courses in all the others so that they are well-trained in the very inclusive field of speech. The professors of speech are concerned with guiding and instructing students in the art of speaking correctly and efficiently.

Have you ever wondered just what motivates Dr. Wright to spend numerous extra hours in the speech clinic working with speech-defected children, or why she is willing, during her holidays from teaching; to attend conventions and conferences for speech therapists, and why she is so enthusiastic about enlarging and improving the speech clinic here at Alabama College? The answer is inherent in Dr. Wright's belief that speech is the paramount talent man possesses which differentiates him from other animals. When man is denied the ability of communicating with his peers, he is being deprived of one of the most important factors that make him a full-fledged human being. This is why she is glad she is a speech correctionist, and her attitude inspires her students to do their best at all times.

For the Juniors it is a year that is filled with aggravating the Seniors, singing "Hound Dog" at strategic times, apprehensious of Crook Week, and planning for the big Junior week end. In the spring, there's the election of next year's S. G. A. president. Crook Week comes and after an eternity is over, there is the thrill of donning the cap and gown for the first time. And finally, planning for the Jr.-Sr. banquet, with its affectionate farewells.

Your Saphomore year is wonderful—probably because you're considered an upperclassman, and you live an back campus. It's a year filled with study (that saphcmare Lit!), and fun (planning the sophomare week end, dates with cadets, long gab fests, parties, and sympathizing with those poar Juniors during Craok Week). All in all, it's one af your favarite callege years.

Your first whole year away from home. It's fun making new friends, attending new and different classes under college professors, fixing up your room in Main, learning all the rules and regulations, spending hours in the Tea House, and buying impressive looking textbooks. You'll always remember that horrible first fire drill, and, for the girls, that frightening night that the Seniors marched—and you will decide that it was a wonderful exciting year.

PURPLE LEADERS
Virginia Dixon, Leader; Corolyn Borton, Assistant Leader

The 1957 College Night changed as has many things at A. C. No longer do you only see girls playing boys parts, but we have the real McCoy. The Gold cabinet also had a boy member and a boy cheerleader. Pep songs changed with the time and you heard such rock-n-roll tunes as Rock-around-the Clock and Hey Rah.

PURPLE CHEERLEADERS: Shirley Autrey, Ardis Powers, Sue Wooten, Martha Williams.

PURPLE CABINET: Wooten, Hall, McGinnis, Dixon, Borton, Wilson, Swindal, Flowers, Autrey, Williams, Wallace, Norton, Jones, Talley, Koley, Goldstein, Bailey, Powers, Lane, White, Kimbrough, Bria, Holliday, Sabine.

an Extravaganza at Magnolia Landing

"My, of my, oh dear me. Hove you see Beebe???"

The Gold set was modernistic with a hanging bar, a slanting bar rail, slanting chairs and tables, and green and red cotton bales. "Tall Tales and Towlines" is a farce built around the experiences and emotions of a rugged lady steamboat captain whose goal in life was to overpower all her male opponents on the Mississippi. She is seen Indian wrestling with her primary rival, shooting dice with her boyfriend, and scalping the lady gambler who unfortunately attempts to infringe on her territory. This comedy reaches its climax when Miss Annie decides to rescue the man she despises most from a sinking steamboat. The most exciting words the Golds heard were exclaimed by the President of S. G. A. when she announced, "The decision of the judges is in favor of the GOLDS," for the first time in four years.

"Lowzy Mr. Cramer, you gonno git skunked sho'."

"I've been wonting o beod off you since you set foot on Mognolio Landing,"

"It's called the Most Wondrous of Gifts."

For the purple production the curtain in Palmer Auditorium was slowly raised to reveal the patio of a beautiful mansion in 17th century Spain. Entitled "The Most Wondrous of Gifts" this serious drama tells the story of a domineering mother's attempt to rule her invalid son. This woman has already undermined her husband's character and has succeeded in making their life together miserable. Their son has experienced little of the joy of life because he has been deprived of that "most wondrous of gifts" —LOVE. The boy's only friends in the household are his tutor and a servant who are in no position to help him escape to the new world, which is his overwhelming desire. Finally, his uncle sends a kindly gypsy entertainer to rescue the boy from his mother's cruel hand.

ANN KIMBROUGH

MISS ALABAMA COLLEGE . . . When these three magic words were spoken Elite Night, the audience sat spellbound for seconds waiting for the winner to be announced. Then "A. K." emerged from behind the curtains, stimulating an outburst of applause. She had been elected days earlier in a campus-wide election, but only the lucky people who counted votes knew who had won. A. K. has indeed earned the right to hold this title, and we are glad that by being elected to this honor, she has received some of the praise she deserves. She is conscientious in her school-work and extra-curricular activities, has an engaging smile and warm personality, and is an active, responsible participator in student government. A. K., We are proud to name you "Miss Alabama College" for 1957.

In the years to come this yearbook will serve as a reminder of life at A. C. in the year 1956-57. When you see the pictures of the class favorites, the beauties, and Senior Elite, they'll mean more than static photographs because you will remember Elite Night with all its headaches, surprises, and glories. Many of you may remember rushing from one building to another to have several different pictures made in one afternoon only to learn two days later that they all had to be remade. Whatever remnants of imagination this 1957 Montage stimulates, we members of the staff hope they will lead to pleasant reminiscences.

Any time we students hear wierd noises late in the night from 2nd floor Reynolds, we automatically know that the Alabamian Staff is at work again. Even though those students may procastinate until the night of that terrible event—deadline—they always succeeded in getting their articles written and typed, the ads designed, and layout completed even if it entailed working until 2:00 a. m., which indeed it did, many times. These staff members have endeavored to publish a paper that is a genuine expression of the student's ideas, beliefs, and attitudes.

Our college radio station has been revolutionized this year. First, we have a new broadcasting schedule which seems to be a pleasant improvement; W R S D is now on the air from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Boys have been welcomed as announcers and engineers; we're happy to proclaim that we have some new records now, and new programs have been added. If you want a treat, tune to W R S D where you can hear national news, sport news, the latest gossip, and all types of music.

The Y.W.C.A. is one of the busiest organization on campus. The new council members begin their work in a big way immediately after installation in the spring by making plans for that notorious Sis-Major, Sis-Minor party. In the summer, letters are sent to the incoming freshmen inviting them to the party and telling them the type of costume to bring from home. We upperclassmen are always expected to be able to design and prepare costumes from the clothes we have available at school. Really, the "Y" members seem to be quite fond of parties; they always sponsor a Servants' Party at Christmas each year. Actually, they do have serious duties to perform, too; the Y.W.C.A. is responsible for our noonday meditations and for the Vesper Services on religious holidays. Each fall they have a "Y" convocation.

"Room Restriction—Do Not Enter." Members of the House Council are usually responsible for these room-restriction signs that appear on students' doors at various times. Sometimes we will forget to sign out or be noisy during quiet hours, and then the House Council punishes us to remind us of our dormitory rules. It seems that one of the most unpleasant duties that these members must perform is asking students to be quiet during quiet hours, especially when they know that they are not always quiet during these stipulated hours themselves.

Mary Gene Marsh, Carolyn Barton, Barbara Goldstein.

We girls at Alabama College may not have the advantage of the well-known ratio at Auburn where the boys exceedingly outnumber the girls, but we do have a Social Committee that is tops in making arrangements for boys to come to Alaabma College for our formal dances. This committee is also responsible for those after-theater coffees when we students are given a chance to meet some of our entertainers. Sometimes we are lucky enough to have soothing music during Sunday dinner; when we hear the music emerge over the noise of the dining room, we all either silently or audibly praise our Social Committee.

SANDRA MULLINS, President

During the first two weeks in November, the members of the Religious Council were really working hard making preparations for Religious Emphasis Week. Planning and executing this event is the primary function of the Religious Council. This year Bishop Murray talked to the student body at 11:00 on Monday through Wednesday mornings, and we had discussion groups on Monday and Tuesday nights. Religious Emphasis Week ended abruptly at 12:00 Wednesday because we all left Montevallo to celebrate Thanksgiving Holidays. I'm sure that we still remember Bishop Murray, and we feel that Religious Emphasis Week was a huge success.

THEATRE EXECUTIVE: Polly Holliday, Barbara Goldstein, Milly Slater, Anne Elise Berry, Barbara Baker.

The Theatre Council is commonly known by its abbreviation—T.C.—and sometimes this is translated (by some fun-loving students) as "Trummy's Club". However, this is not far-fetched. Whenever anyone receives an invitation to join T. C., we always know that they have done outstanding work in the College Theatre; and we also know that in order to remain a member a student must continue to perform well and often in this phase of college life. Dr. Trumbauer requires top performance of these members, but despite this (or maybe because of it) they all respect and love "Trummy." He has had a very successful career as Drama Director at Alabama College, and we sincerely regret that he will retire after this year. He will be greatly missed, both because of his outstanding ability and his well-known personality..

On May 3rd a strange group of creatures were seen wandering around campus—these abnormal figures were actually the "filthy, slimy, despicable" Juniors who were being initiated into Seniordom. Early Friday morning, 4:30 to be exact, the Juniors arose from their comfortable beds to begin the search for the Crook, which the Seniors had hidden somewhere on campus. Of course, hunts for the Crook were interrupted with performances for the most Honorables. The lowlies entertained the Seniors at a party on the terrace, and cleaned and fulfilled numerous individual duties. On Saturday morning the Sacred Crook was found in the wisteria in front of Main by Gail Evans; once again the Juniors were allowed to look and behave like human beings. Saturday night after the lowlies were tried at Crook Court, each Junior received her hard-earned cap and gown; then they were real Seniors!

TIBBY JACKSON, Volleyball Counselor

A. C. sport facilities are unmatched as are its sportsmen and women. In the fall one of the first and best loved intra-mural sports is volleyball. As always, the different classes were in competition; and after a long hard fought battle, Ramsey edged over the big, bad Seniors who this year have a new name "Hound dogs."

A new sport or rather new to Alabama College is football for men.

Two facilities that every A. C. student boasts of is the swimming pool and the lake. As spring comes along, more and more students are seen heading for the lake for a lazy day in the sun. Not only do students travel in that direction in the spring but it is also used the year around for canoeing and casting classes. These classes help you more enjoy the lake all the time and become a more able fisherman and boatman.

I am sure we will not forget the wonderful Christmas swim show. It was evidence of many long hours spent perfecting the art of swimming.
